*Realistic upside assumes filling one third of your open nights at your current rate — a conservative scenario, not a promise; open nights may include dates you have deliberately blocked. How we scored: everything above comes from your live public listing — the 3-month availability calendar, photo set, title, description and review signals, captured on the date on the cover. Scores weight what guests see first when deciding to click: title and cover photo, then photos, then copy. No third-party estimates are used. Demand signal reflects how much of your next 90 days is already booked — steady bookings mean demand exists and presentation, not location, is the constraint. Where the diagnosis cites your review count, that's the listing's own public review total at capture (a new listing starts at zero even when the host profile has reviews).

What's holding you back

- 1 The listing's nightly rate of £99.6 is -36% vs the cohort median of £154.60, making price a major differentiator, but the title fails to emphasize this key selling point effectively.
- 2 The current description is completely missing, offering zero content for guests to learn about the property or experience it might offer.
- 3 The occupancy rate of 64.1% is above the median 90-day occupancy of 47.8% in the market, but the listing lacks specific information about amenities, room coverage, and visual content quality to optimize conversions.

The cover photo should be of the exterior of the building or a wide shot of the living area, whichever is available, as visuals of the location and overall space will create the strongest first impression for potential guests looking for central accommodations.
